Mulawarman Inscriptions, another name of Kutai Inscriptions are artifacts from Kutai Kingdom. Seven pieces of yupa were found and four in out of seven inscriptions have been translated.

This epigraph was written in Sanskrit with Vatteluttu scripts (aksara Pallava). It is assumed that these inscriptions were made about A.D.400, from the shape of the alphabet.

This epigraph is written in type of poem.

This inscription describes that King Mulawarman served may oxen to Brahmaba. They say that King Mulawarman is a grandson of King Kudunga and a son of King Aswawarman.

This inscription evidences the existence of the oldest Hindu Kingdom in Indonesia.

These inscriptions were named after the place, where they were discovered, Kabupaten Kutai of State of East Kalimantan, upper reach of Mahakam River.

D.4	Canggal	A.D. 732	New
Sanskrit	Pallava	Kadiluwih, Salam, Magelang, Jateng
 <110716-121>		The Canggal inscription is a Javanese inscription dated to 732, discovered in the Gunung Wukir temple complex in Kadiluwih village, Salam, Magelang Regency, Central Java. The inscription is written in the Pallava script in the Sanskrit language. The inscription documents an edict of Sanjaya, in which he declared himself the universal ruler of Medang.
++Contents++ The inscription describes the erection of a lingam (the symbol of Shiva) on the hill of Kunjarakunja, by Sanjaya's order. The lingam is sited on the noble island of Yawadwipa (Java), which the inscription describes as blessed with an abundance of rice and gold. Yawadwipa, the inscription says, had long been under the rule of the wise and virtuous king Sanna, but fell after his death into disunity. Amid a period of confusion Sanjaya, son of Sannaha (the sister of Sanna) ascended to the throne. Sanjaya mastered holy scriptures, martial arts, and displayed military prowess. After the conquest of neighboring areas his reign was peaceful and prosperous. The inscription makes reference to Kunjarakunja-desa, perhaps meaning "the hermitage land of Kunjara", which has been identified as the hermitage of Rishi Agastya, a Hindu Maharishi revered in Southern India. The Ramayana contains a reference to a visit to Agastya hermitage on Kunjara by Rama, Sita, and Lakshmana. The name Sanjaya, Sanna and Sannaha curiously was also mentioned in Carita Parahyangan, a book from later period composed around 16th century which suggested refer to same historical person. <Wikipedia>

D.27&34	Kayumwungan (Karang Tengah)	A.D. 824
Sanskrit	Jawa Kuno	Karangtengah, Temanggung, Jateng

<110716-082>

Karangtengah inscription (also known as Kayumwungan inscription) is the inscriptions written on five pieces of stones dated 746 Saka or 824 CE, discovered in Karangtengah hamlet, Temanggung Regency, Central Java, Indonesia. The inscription was written in ancient Javanese script in two languages; Old Javanese and Sanskrit. The lines 1-24 was written in Sanskrit, the rest of the lines were written in old Javanese. The inscription is linked with the temple Borobudur and Mendut

The parts written in Sanskrit mentioned about a king named Samaratungga. His daughter named Pramodhawardhani has inaugurated a Jinalaya (Sanskrit: the realm of those have conquer worldly desire and reach enlightenment), a sacred Buddhist sanctuary. The inscription also mentioned a sacred Buddhist building called Venuvana (Sanskrit: bamboo forest) to place the cremated ashes of 'king of the cloud', the name for god Indra, probably referred to King Indra of Sailendra dynasty. Jinalaya was identified as Borobudur. Venuvana was identified as Mendut temple by Dutch archaeologist JG de Casparis, while Soekmono identified it with Ngawen temple instead.

In the parts written in old Javanese, mentioned about an event, that in the 10th day of Kresnapaksa in the month of Jyestha year 746 Saka (824 CE), Rakai Patapan pu Palar inaugurated that rice fields in Kayumwungan to be the tax free land protected by royal edict. Rakai Patapan pu Palar is identified as Rakai Garung, the king of Medang Kingdom. Indonesian historian Slamet Muljana suggest Rakai Garung was another name of Samaratungga.<Wikipedia>

D.28	Siwagrha (Sivagrha) Balaputra-Jatiningrat	A.D. 856
Unknown	Unknown	Unknown

<110717-042>

The Shivagrha inscription is an inscription from the Medang Kingdom of Central Java, dated in chandrasengkala (chronogram) "Walung gunung sang wiku", that is, the year 856 CE (or 778 in the native Saka Calendar). The inscription was inscribed by order of Dyah Lokapala (Rakai Kayuwangi) right after the end of Rakai Pikatan's reign, and gave a detailed description of a grand temple compound dedicated to Shiva called Shivagrha ("the House of Shiva"), corresponding to the Prambanan temple compound.

A public water project to change the course of a river near Shivagrha Temple is also mentioned in this inscription. The river, identified as the Opak River, now runs north to south on the western side of the Prambanan temple compound. Historians suggest that originally the river was curved further to east and was deemed too near to the main temple.

The project was done by cutting the river along a north to south axis along the outer wall of the Shivagrha Temple compound. The former river course was filled in and made level to create a wider space for the temple expansion, the space for rows of pervara (complementary) temples.

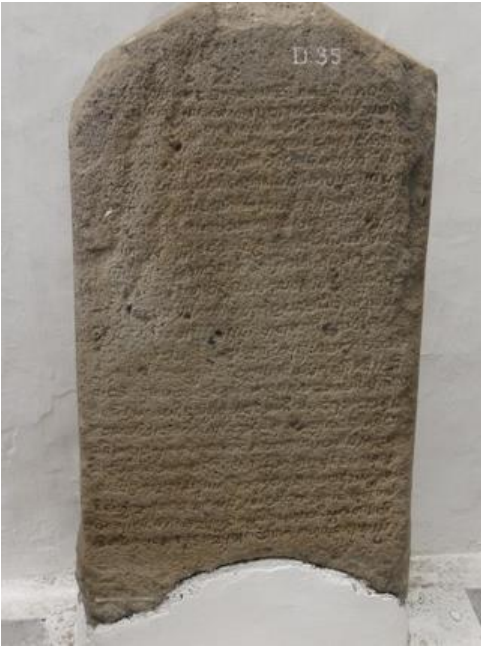

The inscription also mentions a battle for royal succession between Balaputra and Jatiningrat (Rakai Pikatan), Balaputra having made a fortress of hundreds of stones for refuge. Also mentioned is that the King (Pikatan) was a Shaivist, in contrast to his queen consort Pramodhawardhani, who was a Buddhist.

This inscription describes that King of Old Mataram Sri Maharaja Rakai Kayuwangi Dyah Lokapala rewarded this forest to Sang Pamgat Balakas of a judge and a chief of religious judicial affairs.

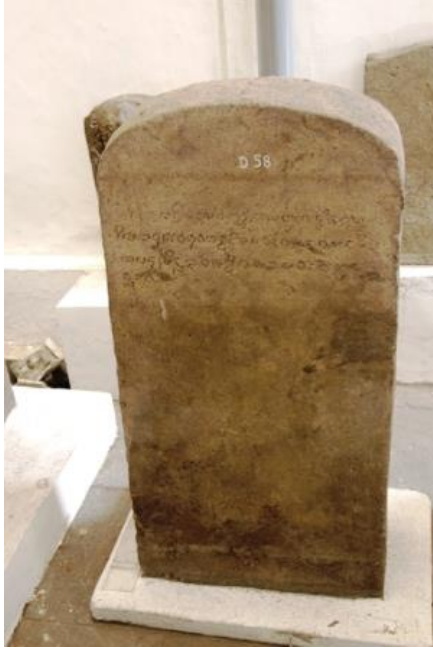

The King provided six pegs to surround this area which show names of village masters in classic Java script.

According to Ms. Titi Surti Nastiti of an expert of epigraphy, the pegs should have been eight (8) sets, since they must show boundaries among this area, Desa Kandang and Desa Pakuwani. We, however, have found only six (6) pieces. This area has been residential area of Slemen in Yogyakarta at present. <<http://nationalgeographic.co.id/berita/2012/09/manifestasi-prasasti-salimar-dalam-dunia-pendidikan>>

Villagers were worried about payment of penalties to the government. Since villagers should be responsible to such criminal cases where they were executed or the place where a victim was found, according to old Javanese rule. Then, Ḍapunta Ramyaḥ, Ḍapu Hyaḇ Bharatī, Ḍaman Tarṣa and Ḍapu Jala applied exemption this field of Gurubhakti from taxation to Rakryān Kanuruhan pu Huntu, so as to avoid the villagers from huge amount of penalties. < http://kepleset.blogspot.jp/2011/09/premanisme-sejak-zaman-jawa-kuno.html > Brandes gave this inscription a code of D.54. Kota Kapur Inscription is an inscription discovered in western coast of Bangka Island, offcoast South Sumatra, Indonesia, by J.K. van der Meulen in December 1892. It was named after "Kotakapur" village, the location where this archaeological findings were discovered. This inscription is using old Malay language written in Pallava letters. It was one of the oldest surviving written evidence of ancient Malay language. The inscription dated first day of half moon Vaisakha on the year 608 Saka (28 February 686 CE), mentioned about the curse of whomever committed treason against Srivijaya and the beginning of Srivijayan invasion against Java. The inscriptions was first examined and analized by H. Kern, a Dutch epigrapher that worked for Bataviaasch Genootschap in Batavia. At first he taught that Srivijaya was the name of a king. It was George Coedes that credited for the discovery of Srivijaya, a name of a 7th-century Sumatran maritime empire that ruled over much of western Indonesia include Malay peninsula and Southern Thailand. The Kota Kapur inscription is dated from Srivijaya era. <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Kota_Kapur_inscription>

D.198	Amoghapasa (Padang Roco)	A.D.1286
Sanskrit	Unknown	Siguntur, Sitiun,Darmasraya, Sumbar

<110716-097>

This inscription was found at Padang Roco temples in Darmasraya in 1911.

This epigraph was written on the back side of Amoghapasa statue. It is also caked as Padang Roco Inscription engraved by King Adityawarman for explanation of its history in 1347.

This statue was presented by King Kartanegara of Singasari Kingdom to King Tribhuanaraja of Melayu Kingdom in 1286. It is observed the sentence on pedestal of the statue that Padang Roco inscription is an attachment to the statue.

Epigraph was written in Sanskrit that did not conform to its grammatical rules. This fact has made the translation more difficult.

Most of the part of the inscription are the words of praise to King Adityawarman.

The part to be able to be translated inform us that Dharmasekra, Acarya, made the Amoghapasa statue by the order of King Adityawarman (Adityawarmodaya). King Adityawarman revived Melayu Kingdom and named the city as Malayapura, and called himself as a Maharaja with title of Srimat Sri Udayadityawarma Pratapaparakrama Rajendra Maulimali Warmadewa.

OBSERVATION

These are the observations by the editor of this booklet, Mr. Shigehisa Taguchi.

The following table show the quantities of inscriptions in this booklet sorted by century and area. This data was shown on a map at the last page of this booklet.

Table of Inscriptions (pc)

Inscription in this booklet which were built at the early times are written in Sanskrit language. This fact shows existence of strong influence of Northern Indian culture as well as the other South East Asian countries.

Since the confusion of several hundred years is followed in North India across the AD, and the Buddhism was restrained in Hinduism, Indian aristocratic have been moved to Southeast Asia to avoid war. They brought Indian culture and religions. The Indian culture influenced not only Indonesia but also Champa in Vietnam at present. Due to expansion of the Indian cultures, South East Asian countries developed in cultural and economic fields. George Coedés might call these countries as “the Indianized States” as a title of his book.

This fact The civilization and stability of the South East Asian countries accelerated trading business between China and India through the Sea Silkroad. The hero in trading business was Champa and Sriwijaya Kingdoms.

The table made intimates that,

1. Kutai Kingdom was overthrown by unknown reasons and they left themselves on Mulawarman Yupas at 5th century.
2. Ancient kingdoms in the area of Dieng Highland and Jogjakarta were born as well as kingdoms in Malang highland in the same period.
3. No inscription in 11th century was listed above for both states of Central and Eastern Java in these list. This might be influenced by volcanic eruptions of Mt. Merapi and Mt. Semeru in the Central and Eastern Java respectively.
4. We generally have found the archeological sites at places with higher altitude. There are many sites along the ancient main roads that pass through hilly area of Java Island, such as Malang, Blitar and Tulungagung. Two large rivers, Bengawan Solo and Kali Brantas, flow into Java Sea at northern coast of the Island. These two rivers attacked their lower area by flood every year and have formed wetlands at their river mouths. Then, population in this area was less than the southern hilly area.
5. By the way, the city of Surabaya is located at a delta of Brantas River. Actually, the western part of Surabaya are lower hilly area and an ancient port city of Gresik is located at the north from Surabaya. Then, the city of Surabaya has functioned as a transshipment port and business points between sea and river transportation to Surakarta and Kediri/Tulungagung in Bengawan Solo and Kali Brantas.
6. We can see many artifacts during Majapahit Kingdom at Trowulan Archeological Museum along Route No.2 between Jombang and Mojokerto.
7. Though there are a few numbers of inscriptions found around Madiun city, we have not discovered a large scaled archeological sites in this area. There are a few holly places in Mt. Lawu and crowded by many visitors with various religions, such as Alas Ketonggo and Pringondani at northern and southern part of this mountain respectively.
8. Many archeological sites have been found in Kediri that name is famous with king Jayabaya. These sites are relatively smaller than the Trowulan.
9. There are two famous archeological sites in city of Malang, namely Dinoyo (Dinaya) at northwestern part of Malang and Singosari (Singasari) at 20 kilometers north of this city.
10. Most of inscriptions found in Sumatra Island were written in Proto-Malay which relate to Sriwijaya Kindom born in 7th century. On the centrally the ones found in Java Island were written in Java Classic, excepting some cases. The present Indonesian-Malay language seemed to be derived from Minangkabau languages for trading business. After collapse of Sriwijaya Kingdom, these area was divided into three for kingdoms of Minangkabau, Melayu (Darmasraya) and Palembang.

I advise you to read these two books written by Slamet Muljana

- Sriwijaya
- Menuju Puncak Kemegahan (Sejarah Kerajaan Majapahit)

These two books are written in Indonesian language. No translation in English may be available.
